I discovered myself in back-end programming and database management; I enjoy planning, learning, and searching.

I have patience and perform well under pressure, which drives me to give my all to any organisation since I want to gain experience and prove that I'm the greatest candidate for the job... I am capable of teaching, learning, and planning.

What are the primary characteristics of a competent programmer, and I discovered these in myself?

Concerned with producing clean code, the value of my product represents me, and this is what I desire.
